ESTABLISHES VOCATIONAL SCHOOLS -- Hua-shang Pao, 15 Sep 49

Pei-p'ing, 13 September (NCNA) -- Many technicians and engineers are needed in Northeast China to increase industrial and mineral output. To train such personnel, the Technology Department of the Northeast Administrative Committee has been establishing, many advanced vocational schools during the last 2 years.

At present, there are ten such schools with a total enrollment of 5,012 students. Most of the students are graduates of middle or higher schools. These schools are: the Sen-yang School of Electrical Engineering, the Sen-yang School of Textile Engineering, the An-tung School of Technology, the Chi-lin School of Technology, the Fu-shun School of Mineralogy, the An-shan School of Technology, and the Lin-wu (Ueda: 4803, 390) Advanced Vocational School.

Soviet scientific techniques and know-how are especially emphasized under the technological curriculums. Therefore, each student must take 4 hours of Russian language per week as one of the required subjects. In addition, 54 to 67.3 percent of the entire course deals with general subjects.

It requires from one to 3 years for a student to graduate. He is then employed in a factory and goes through apprentice training before he becomes a full-fledged technician or engineer.

REVOLUTIONARY SCHOOL ATTENDANCE INCREASES -- Hua-shang-Pao, 15 Sep 49

Ch'ang-sha, 14 September (NCNA) -- More and more students are now attending various revolutionary schools in Ch'ang-sha.

These schools include: The People's Revolutionary University, the 12th Regiment Military School, the Hupei Engineering College, the Ch'ang-sha School of Journalism, and Hunan University, which is a branch of the Central China Military University.

Requests for enrollment in the People's Revolutionary University have been especially large. Of the 14,000 who have already applied for enrollment, only 3,000 will be qualified. More than 500 Hunan University students have passed the examination to enter this school. Despite the danger of being caught by Gen Pai Ch'ung-hsi's KMT bandit troops, many former students of the Yo-li and the Chen-sha schools, from the Yo-nan District, are coming to Ch'ang-sha to enroll in the People's Revolutionary University or join up with the CCP troops.

In a like manner, many women students from Hsiang-hsiang and Ning-hsiang walk several tens of miles to attend schools in Ch'ang-sha.

About four fifths of the middle-school students in Ch'ang-sha have taken summer courses in order to pass the examinations to enter higher schools.
